Keynote With Suzanne Miller:
"Head, Hands, Heart, and Hope:
We Can All Make a Difference".

Creating a better world, including better futures for all children and families, is in the hands of all of us. In the keynote address, Suzanne Miller will explore what both children and adults can do to make a difference in the world through the framework of head, heart, hands and hope-- what we know, how we feel, what we can do, and our vision of what is possible through our work and advocacy.

Presenters and Workshops

A Outdoor Play: A Better Way Nancy White

Discover innovative ways to make outdoor time an integral part of your daily curriculum. Through the use of slides, hand-on materials, songs, fingerplays and children's literature, the workshop gives participants specific ways to integrate the outdoors into the indoor curriculum through collections, nature study, and the creation of mini-habitats.

B Sensory Integration Stacey Lovern

Sensory integration dysfunction is often not well understood by teachers. This workshop will help caregivers understand the theory of sensory integration and intervention methods. These, in turn, can help explain and decrease challenging behavior problems. This will be hands-on workshop including many ideas that can be utilized in classrooms and homes right away.

C See How They Grow— Infants and Toddlers Jennifer Berke

In this workshop, participants will receive a brief explanation of the philosophy of the phenomenological approach regarding caring, educating, and interacting with infants and toddlers. Using this approach, teachers come to recognize that caring for, being with, educating, and nurturing children are all of equal importance.

D Child Havens: Creating Intentional Environments that Promote Positive Interactions, Open Communication and Respect for All Children Starting Small

This hands-on workshop will explore ways to arrange your physical space and the materials needed to promote communication and collaboration among children. Young children are capable of solving conflicts when they are given the tools they need. We will discuss the elements of creating intentional spaces, what materials are needed to promote communication and how to arrange the centers in your room to promote respect for all children.

E Science for Young Engineer Michael Jabot

This workshop is for those interested in helping young learners work on concepts in physical science through design and play. Engage in an interactive experience and leave with applicable ideas for the classroom.

F Sowing the Seeds of Social Justice through Children's Literature and Expressive Arts Suzanne Miller

Creating a better world, including better futures for all children and families, is in the hands of all of us. In the keynote address, Suzanne Miller will explore what both children and adults can do to make a difference in the world through the framework of head, heart, hands and hope--what we know, how we feel, what we can do, and our vision of what is possible through our work and advocacy.

G Portfolio Assessment Jeremy Daly Griffen

Portfolios provide insight into the student mind that could never have been tapped into through the use of standardized or high-stakes tests alone. In this workshop we will look at what information should be collected and the documentation needed to develop a portfolio.

Driving Directions

From the north from NY Thruway:
Take Westfield Exit 60. Turn South (left) on Rte. 394 through traffic light in downtown Westfield (junction with Rte. 20). Rte. 394 winds up and around the hills. The building is on your right 5.8 miles from the junction with Rte. 20 in Westfield. Rte. 394 dips down a little slope, and at the bottom it divides into three lanes - Turn Right.

From the south, via Rte. 394:
Take Rte. 394 north to the traffic light in downtown Mayville (junction with Rte. 394). At junction with Rte. 430, continue north on Rte. 394 for 1/2 mile. The school will be on your left.
